North Attleborough Electric Department general manager receives leadership and managerial excellence award

New Orleans, La., June 19, 2018 —James C. Moynihan, General manager of North Attleborough Electric Department (NAED) in Massachusetts, received the Mark Crisson Leadership and Managerial Excellence Award at the American Public Power Association's national conference in New Orleans, Louisiana. This Award recognizes managers at a utility, joint action agency, or state or regional association who steer their organizations to new levels of excellence, lead by example, and inspire staff to do better.

James has been General Manager of North Attleborough Electric Department 2005. He has invested in utility performance and system improvement through benchmarking with the American Public Power Association. Under his leadership, NAED has won several awards and earned the Association's RP3 or Reliable Public Power Provider designation five times. James spearheaded the construction of two new distribution circuits. He implemented new technologies to improve system reliability and customer service. He has designed new customer rates that include an annual customer credit. He is always learning in the trenches, and inspiring his team with his own passion to move the utility forward.

The American Public Power Association is the voice of not-for-profit, community-owned utilities that power 2,000 towns and cities nationwide. We represent public power before the federal government to protect the interests of the more than 49 million people that public power utilities serve, and the 93,000 people they employ. Our association advocates and advises on electricity policy, technology, trends, training, and operations. Our members strengthen their communities by providing superior service, engaging citizens, and instilling pride in community-owned power.
