The State of Public Power

Joy Ditto, President & CEO, American Public Power Association
As we reflect on 80 years of being connected as a public power community, we also reflect on how we have endured the recent pandemic and other crises throughout our history. Get the latest update on how APPA is working to protect the interests of public power in Washington, D.C., and helping our members to navigate an increasingly complex industry.

Transforming After the Crisis: Becoming Reputationally Resilient, Crisis Ready, and Risk Aware

Bill Coletti, CEO, Kith, Austin, Texas
You have a problem and you might not even know it. Your utility’s good reputation is the beating heart that allows you to bounce back from a crisis quickly. But if it isn’t properly cared for, the arteries of goodwill get clogged and a reputation heart attack hits. Bill Coletti will reveal a reputation resiliency plan for your utilities, including how to empower general counsel and attorneys to be among your reputation’s primary caregivers.

Labor and Employment Law in the Time of COVID-19

Labor and employment law continue to evolve in reaction to the dramatic changes within our society, including new operational challenges posed by the COVID-19 pandemic. Accordingly, in-house counsel are navigating an ever-changing legal landscape, with issues such as maintaining a safe workplace, following new paid sick leave and expanded FMLA requirements and changing ADA accommodation laws. Review these issues and hear how other developments, such as protections for LGBTQ workers, accommodations for opioid and marijuana use, and presidential appointments will likely impact your year ahead.

Is the Juice Worth the Squeeze? A Look at FERC’s Transmission Incentives Policy

Amid an era of increased transmission investment, FERC proposes significant revisions to its transmission incentives policy. Panelists will debate how proposed reforms might resolve or exacerbate the challenges posed by FERC’s current incentives policy, how customers might be affected, and what public power can do to ensure necessary transmission investments are made at reasonable costs.

Energy and Administrative Law in the Supreme Court: Recent Developments and Trends

Explore how 2019 and 2020 Supreme Court administrative law decisions reflect trends with respect to judicial deference to agencies, nondelegation issues, and the development of agency records. Analyze how these trends could extend to the energy context and what could affect public power.

Hannah Wiseman, Professor of Law, Professor and Wilson Faculty Fellow in the College of Earth and Mineral Sciences, and Institutes of Energy and the Environment Co-funded Faculty Member, Penn State University Law School, University Park, Pennsylvania

COVID-19: Preparing for the Next Crisis

Take a look back at the lessons learned to date from the COVID-19 pandemic with a focus on the federal, state and local regulatory and legislative response affecting the public power industry. This session will explore Congressional, FERC, NERC, state and local actions taken in response to COVID-19 and discuss what public power utilities can expect in response to, and what steps should be taken to prepare for, future disrupting events. Review what has worked well in responding to an extended national crisis and what can be done better in the future.

SPP’s Western Energy Imbalance Service: Design, Status, and Market Impacts

In 2020, the Southwest Power Pool (SPP) filed with FERC to offer the Western Energy Imbalance Service an alternative to the California Independent System Operator Corporation’s Western Energy Imbalance Market, which is expected to serve customers in 11 states and one Canadian Province by 2022. FERC rejected, without prejudice, SPP’s initial proposal and SPP has signaled its intent to file a revised proposal. Learn how FERC has responded to the differing approaches, gain perspective on what each option offers for public power, and review seams, governance, and transparency considerations.

FERC Order No. 2222: What It Means for Public Power

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) recently issued Order No. 2222, its long-awaited final rule addressing the participation of aggregated distributed energy resources in markets administered by Regional Transmission Organizations (RTOs) and Independent System Operators (ISOs). The policies adopted in Order No. 2222 could have significant impacts on distribution utilities and other market participants in RTO/ISO regions. Get an overview of this important new rule and learn what it may mean for public power utilities.

PURPA Re-envisioned
FERC substantially revised its regulations implementing PURPA in July 2020 – the first wholesale change to these rules in over 40 years. FERC states that the revisions address, in part, concerns over the adequacy of existing mandatory purchase obligations to address a new wave of qualifying facility applications. The rule will limit utility-purchaser risk, take a market-based approach to purchasing practices, and restrict what FERC sees as the opportunities its former rules provided for QFs to game the system. Opponents of the rule have argued that it will constrain the development of renewable resources in contravention of Congressional intent. Join this session to review which regulations were revised, what these new rules mean for PURPA compliance programs, and examine other issues associated with public power and PURPA implementation.

Harvey Reiter, Partner, and Jon Trotta, Partner, Stinson LLP, Washington, D.C.

Compliance 101: Demystifying the Federal Communications Laws
Communications service providers can be subject to a tangle of federal regulations. Learn which rules are of greatest interest to public providers of communications services - such as those governing universal service reporting and contributions, support of law enforcement agencies, protection of customer privacy, and transparent disclosures of broadband service features. Get a handy primer that analyzes rules in depth and a compliance checklist that includes pertinent deadlines and links to agency guidelines and forms to keep up with recordkeeping and reporting requirements.

100% Emission-Free By 2050: What Public Power Counsel Need To Know About State 100% Renewable Energy Mandates, Compliance Options, and Opportunities

States and municipalities across the country have adopted mandates requiring a transition to 100% renewable or non-emitting energy by mid-century. This massive shift in the nation’s energy mix has profound implications for utilities, whether directly impacted by a mandate or not. Learn how you can reduce your utility’s risk of noncompliance by examining the precise language of these goals, finding "off-ramps" for cost or reliability concerns, or identifying alternate routes to compliance. Discuss likely effects on utility operations and the markets as well as opportunities brought by this dramatic transition.

Eric Christensen, Of Counsel, Beveridge & Diamond, Seattle, Washington, and Brook Detterman, Principal, Beveridge & Diamond, Boston, Massachusetts

Recent Developments in NERC Compliance

As utilities’ obligations under the mandatory reliability standards promulgated by the North American Electric Reliability Corporation continue to evolve, make sure you understand and have the latest guidance. Review recent actions, such as on supply chain risk mitigation, critical infrastructure protection standards, and other developments. Check in on the status of proposals related to Phases 1 and 2 of NERC’s Standards Efficiency Review Initiative.

13:00 – 1:15 p.m. CT / 12:30 – 1:15 p.m. MT / 11:30 a.m. – 12:15 p.m. PT

The Line Between Market Monitoring and FERC Regulatory Oversight

Examine how both internal and external market monitors affect the design, justification and implementation of rules set by regional transmission organizations and independent system operators in their electricity markets, and the level of deference FERC gives to market monitoring unit analyses.

View From the Bench: Three Recent Cases with Implications for Public Power

Anytime there are dramatic departures to rules or regulations, disputes arise, and litigation by those most affected is often the result. Explore the implications for public power in three cases: the Supreme Court’s decision in County of Maui v. Hawaii Wildlife Fund; the pending litigation surrounding EPA’s supplemental finding regarding the Mercury and Air Toxics Standards before the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit; and the challenges to EPA’s Affordable Clean Energy Rule pending before the D.C. Circuit.

Ethics for Super Stressed Lawyers

Skeptical, competitive and issue-oriented lawyers can be slow to acknowledge stress, yet lawyers are among the most stressed and least healthy working professionals. Focus on how to spot and counter this threat to well-being when faced with it in the workplace - by examining case scenarios and rules of conduct. Learn some skills to recognize and reduce stress and promote sustainable high-level performance in your workplace.
