Florida Municipal Electric Association executive director receives public power service award

New Orleans, La., June 19, 2018 —Amy Zubaly, executive director of the Florida Municipal Electric Association (FMEA) in Tallahassee, Florida, received the Harold Kramer-John Preston Personal Service Award at the American Public Power Association's national conference in New Orleans, Louisiana. This award recognizes individuals for their service to the American Public Power Association.

Amy has previously been the director of public affairs, and deputy director of public affairs and strategic communications at FMEA. She has been active in the American Public Power Association for 18 years. She is a member of the Association's Advisory Committee and Legislative and Resolutions Committee. She also serves on the Association's Mutual Aid Working Group. Amy is recognized as Florida's public power expert and is routinely called on by state and national media for her insights on the electric utility industry. She played a major role in public power's mutual aid response to Hurricanes Irma and Maria in 2017.

The American Public Power Association is the voice of not-for-profit, community-owned utilities that power 2,000 towns and cities nationwide. We represent public power before the federal government to protect the interests of the more than 49 million people that public power utilities serve, and the 93,000 people they employ. Our association advocates and advises on electricity policy, technology, trends, training, and operations. Our members strengthen their communities by providing superior service, engaging citizens, and instilling pride in community-owned power.
