

Rishi Garg has joined the White House Carbon Pollution-Free Electricity Team on detail from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission where he worked in the Energy Markets group within the Office of the General Counsel. Rishi previously worked at the U.S. Department of Energy, intervening in state regulatory proceedings on behalf of federal customer loads. Rishi has also served as General Counsel for the National Regulatory Research Institute, and as an attorney for the Washington, D.C. Office of the People's Counsel, the Natural Resources Defense Council and the Illinois Office of the Attorney General.